

Choo-Choo Song, The

Once there was a choo-choo, but he couldn't choo-choo so the story goes.
He was saying achoo instead of saying choo-choo, 'cause he had a cold in his nose.
I'll the little children laughed at him and teased him.
Sticks and stones they threw.
Because he was saying achoo instead of saying choo-choo like the other choo-choo trains do.
We'll the children were playing on the tracks one day, and the little train was headed their way.
We knew he couldn't stop, and he couldn't turn back, so he said "ACHOO" and blew them off the track.

Now they wait for hours, showering him with flowers when he's coming through.
He is a hero, and so ends the story of the little train that said achoo.
